The Material Advantage™ program provides college students with a single, low-cost membership to materials science and engineering professional organizations: ACerS, AIST, ASM International and TMS.

The Material Advantage program now has more than 3,800 members who receive the following benefits:

- Special conference rates, travel grants and publication discounts.
- The printed journal from each organization on a monthly rotating basis, including American Ceramic Society Bulletin (ACerS), Iron & Steel Technology (AIST), Advanced Materials and Processes (ASM) and JOM (TMS).
- Access to nearly $600,000 in scholarships and grants through the societies and their various chapters and foundations.
- Complimentary membership, upon graduation, to all four societies for one year.

AIST’s participation in Material Advantage provides a significant opportunity to reach a large student audience through communication between the students and AIST Member Chapters and Technology Committees.

Material Advantage currently has 85 active chapters at academic institutions throughout the United States, Canada and abroad. Each chapter has a faculty advisor to guide the students as they plan events, develop programs and enter contests. Most importantly, these advisors mentor the students in career opportunities and will serve as the key link to communication between AIST and the students.

Forging Stronger Partnerships

AIST Member Chapters hold events each month that include dinner meetings, technical presentations and social events. Our members meet and network with others from the local community, while gaining valuable knowledge about the many aspects of iron and steel production.

AIST Member Chapters help to facilitate the exchange of ideas, strengthen our global network and represent an integral component of the AIST program.

For more information about your local chapter or to get involved, contact Nicole Mattern at nmattern@aist.org or (724) 814-3054, or visit AIST.org.
