U. S. Steel Statement on Sec. 232 National Security Action on Steel and the WTO

Making steel in America is critical to our national and economic security, and U. S. Steel commends the Biden Administration for strongly defending American steelmaking at the World Trade Organization. U.S. courts have repeatedly upheld the Section 232 statute and the Section 232 steel action. The World Trade Organization should not get to decide U.S. national security policy. We are confident that this World Trade Organization opinion will not affect the Section 232 policy, and it will remain in place.

As a company that mines, melts and makes steel here at home, we are proud of the role we play in ensuring national and economic security.
